CITING GOVERNMENT SOURCES

CITING CONGRESS.GOV SUMMARIES

To cite a summary from the congress.gov website, check Appendix 7.1 on pages 216-224 in the Publication Manual of the American Psychological Association.

WORKS CITED PAGE ENTRY:

Note that the author is the Congressional Research Service (CRS), there is no date listed, and the title of the work is the bill number listed on the page.

IN-TEXT ENTRY
In 2010, restrictions on the number of sites at which private nonprofits could operate the Summer Food Service Program were removed (Congressional Research Service, n.d.). Note that the author is listed as Congressional Research Service because this is the first instance of citing it in-text. The second time, I could abbreviate it to CRS.

CITING GOVERNMENT WEB PAGES

Cite government webpages like all other webpages. Look for as much information as you can find to guide the reader back to your source.

IN-TEXT ENTRY
In some cases, the income eligibility of the children served at a SFSP site affects the amount the provider is reimbursed (Ohio Department of Education, n.d.). The second time I cite this page, it would look like this (ODE, n.d.).
